DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on December 1, 2005 has been entered.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's amendments and arguments have been found convincing and the rejections of the previous Office Action have been withdrawn. However, because anything can be considered "movable", claim 2 simply reads to aim the evaporation energy source towards the target. Almost all processes of this type embody this feature, as evaporating the target would be difficult otherwise. The rejection below reads on the applicant's claims for this reason. Applicant's arguments are moot in view of the new grounds of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

Art Unit: 1762

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 2, 3, 6, 23, and 24-28 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Yializis et al. (US 4,842,893).

Yializis teaches providing multiple substrates (column 9, lines 1-25; figure 4, ref. 166 and 168), a fixed ion source (column 7, lines 15-40), a movable target (column 4, lines 45-66) that is positioned at source deposition location (figure 2, ref. 124), and material is deposited on the substrates. The shutters are taught (column 8, lines 55-60; figure 1, ref. 52). Multiple targets that are moved into the source deposition location are taught (figure 1) and the substrates are rotated (figure 4).

Claims 4 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yializis et al. (US 4,842,893), as applied to claim 3 above, and further in view of Kelley et al. (US 4,101,925).

Yializis teaches the limitations of claim 3, as shown above, but is silent to the speed of rotation. However, Kelley teaches that the speed at which the substrate is rotated is significant in achieving thin uniform layers (column 3, lines 58-65). Speeds within the applicant's claims are taught. It would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to rotate the substrates of Yializis by the speeds taught by Kelley. By doing so, one would reap the benefits of achieving uniform films.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claim 1 is allowed.

Claims 5 and 7-10 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: The prior art fails to teach, or make obvious, the limitation of ceasing deposition of the layer prior to achieving target thickness, by shuttering the substrates, then independently unshuttering the substrates to resume deposition in order to achieve target thickness, in combination with the limitations from which they depend.
